In the heart of a dusty attic, small and easy to miss, lived a gentle whale.

The gentle whale was very small, and the wide a dusty attic felt so very big.

Every day the gentle whale looked around and wondered if it could ever matter.

Then one morning, something went wrong in a dusty attic.

The light went out, and everyone was afraid.

"I am too small," the gentle whale thought. "But I will try anyway."

The gentle whale took a deep breath and tried with all its heart.

It was not magic. It was trying, again
and again, until it worked.

It was not magic. It was trying, again
and again, until it worked.

But it remembered the faces that needed help, and it stood up again.

The first try did not work. It only made things wobble.

The gentle whale sat down and felt very small indeed.

But it remembered the faces that needed help, and it stood up again.

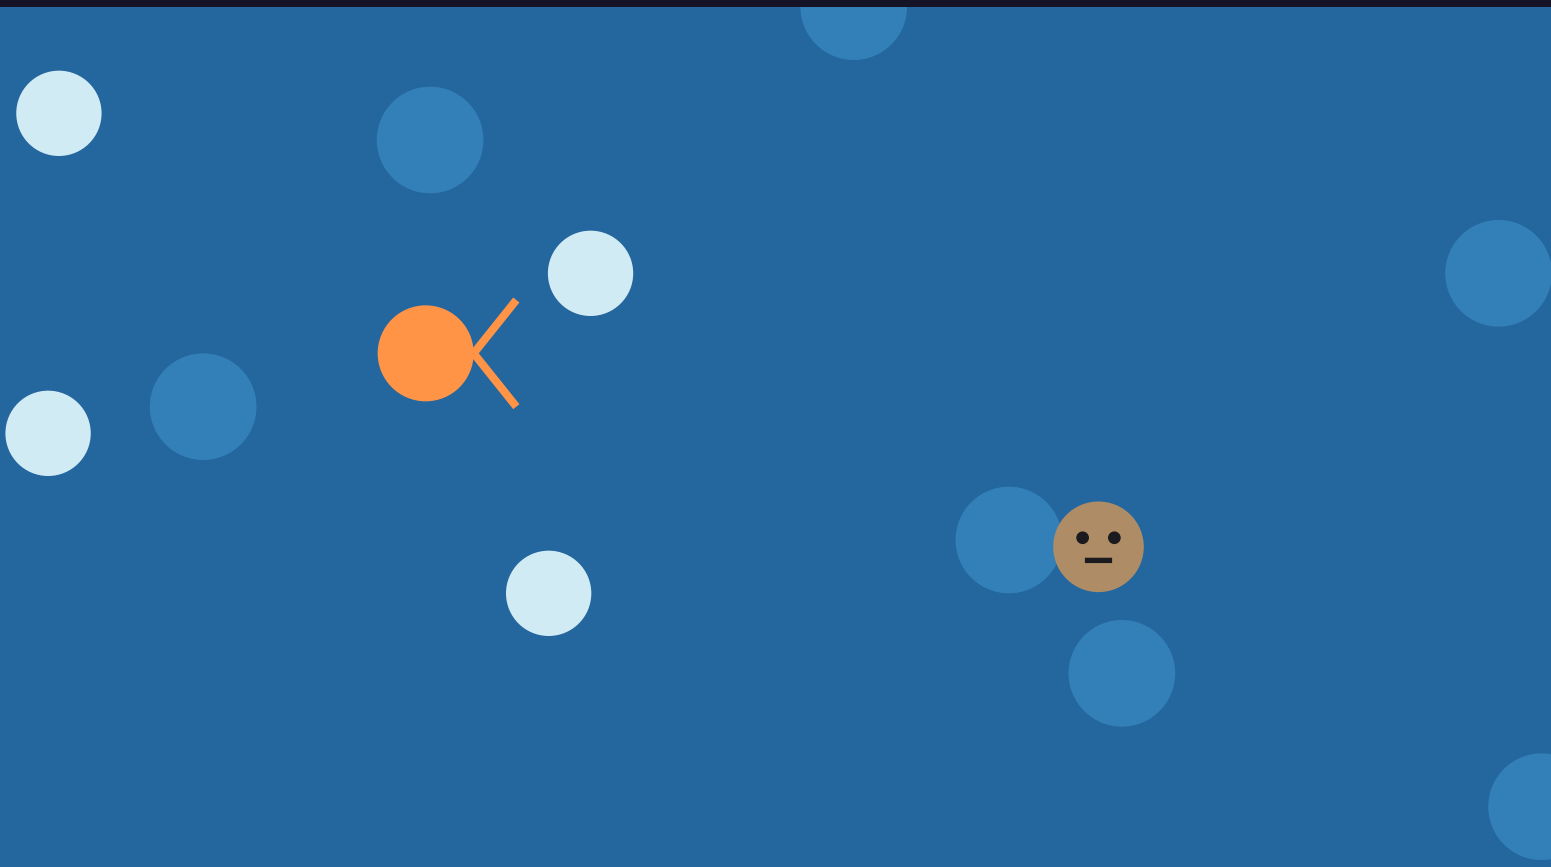

The second try was better. The third was braver.

Little by little, the gentle whale kept going, and the others began to help too.

It was not magic. It was trying, again
and again, until it worked.

The wind picked up, but the gentle whale held on.

A friend called out, and the gentle whale felt less alone.

A dark blue night sky with a yellow crescent moon in the upper right and several small white stars scattered across the upper half.

Every time it fell, it learned one new thing.

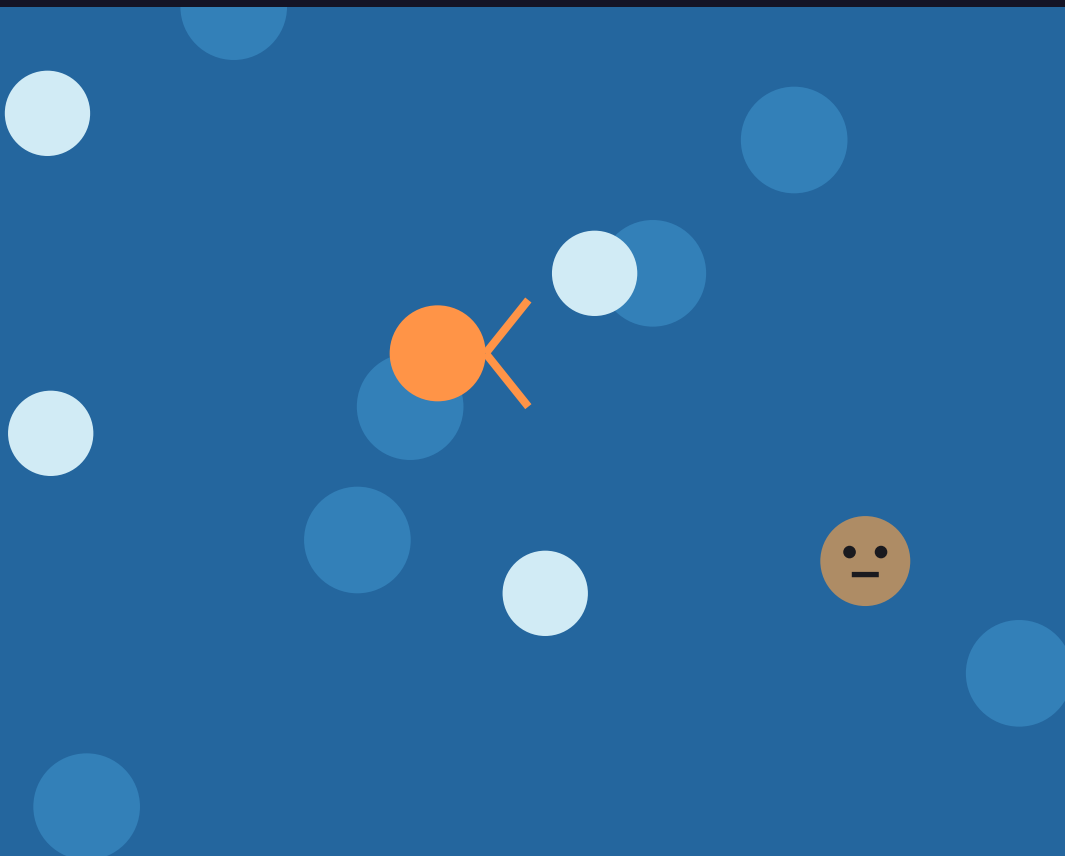

"You can do it," someone whispered. And the gentle whale believed it.

Step by step, the gentle whale found a new way no one had seen before.

It tried again, and this time, it worked.

Everyone in a dusty attic gathered around, amazed.

The gentle whale learned: listening is its own kind of help.

The End

listening is its own kind of help
